

Timely Hints From the Beaver Lodge Sub-Station

W. D. Albright
"IT IS A PLEASURE AS WELL AS A DUTY TO SERVE"

June days bring June problems. Of late the cutworm problem has kept officials on the jump.

Timely Hints are abbreviated this week to make space for Mr. Kenneth M. King's addresses on cutworms. His messages, reporting the results of local findings, have been widely heeded and have led to prompt action in many cases.

In connection with the cutworm investigations in progress, locally the cooperation of the provincial field men and of the Alberta Department of Agriculture is being secured, that could possibly be asked. Mr. J. L. Kerns, who was sent north with instructions to supervise a grasshopper baiting campaign, has found himself occupied with cutworms instead. Everybody concerned has had but one thought, viz., to help people save their gardens and field crops.

Knock! knock! The latest wrinkle in the psychological approach commands that we rap on the hen-house door before entering. Thus the fowl are prepared for the human visitor and, by keeping calm, pay a greater dividend in egg-production. The National Research Station, Beltsville, Md., explains that excitement stimulates a chicken's nervous system, which in turn weakens the thyroid gland, producing thyroxine, which interferes with egg-laying. E.C.S.

To starve out newly hatched cutworms King advises keeping the summerfallow clean during June and July, especially from mid-June to the end of July. It is particularly advised that large weeds be eliminated even though that means some hand work. Tillage operations at any time should not be deeper nor more frequent than is definitely needed to control weeds, and careful timing of all operations will help greatly in this. A cultivation during the latter half of July is of value to destroy some of the maturing brood in their fragile pupal cases and is of advantage to prepare adequately by a single spreading of bait.

Q. Can I obtain equally good results for myself?
A. Yes, under most conditions, if you follow the simple directions. Occasionally, with very dry soil and a thick stand of succulent plants, results may be poor. But in early June conditions were most ideal for poisoning red-backed cutworms.
Q. A bait in which light lubricating oil is used (instead of water-molasses mixture) to moisten the bran is proving exceptionally satisfactory. It remains effective for several days after spreading, unless there is a heavy rain or dust storm. J. L. Kerns suggested that if one had not unlimited power it would be better to clear up a small field at a time. In that case the risk of drifting would be minimized. If drifting started, such as furrowing, might be adopted to check it.

they eat the spruce needles. Would you tell me what to spray them with? I have nicotine sulphate and a good sprayer. Would this be strong enough? Would it be advisable to spray the trees before the worms appear?—C.T., Wainman, Alta.
Ans.: Undoubtedly a spray on the spruce. While a strong solution of contact spray such as nicotine sulphate and soap would probably be effective, my stomach poison is still more so. Spray with lead arsenate or dust lightly with a mixture of Paris green, 1 part to 15 parts of lime dust. K. M. King.

CATECHISM REGARDING RED-BACKED CUTWORM CONTROL

(Adapted from a local radio address given June 7 by Kenneth M. King, Dominion Entomological Laboratory, Saskatoon, Sask., who has been conducting some very satisfactory experiments in the Peace on baiting the red-backed cutworm with fluosilicate oil baits.)

Q. Will poisoned bait really control red-backed cutworms?

A. It certainly will, when properly used. In recent experiments at Beaver Lodge a cutworm was spread on June 3 in a thick stand of second-year alfalfa which had been badly eaten by cutworms. Two days later, on June 7, it was found that alfalfa at random in the area where oil bait had been spread were dead or dying. This is a 35 per cent kill.

Q. What bait do you recommend?
A. Absolutely not of young wheat, where poison was spread at the same time, a single night gave an 80 per cent kill. The oil bait was 60 to 65 per cent for the water bait. Remember that the bait, especially the oil bait, contains a very strong odor, so that the final kill would be much higher. Certainly this crop cranks because used satisfactorily by a single spreading of bait.

Q. Can I obtain equally good results for myself?
A. Yes, under most conditions, if you follow the simple directions. Occasionally, with very dry soil and a thick stand of succulent plants, results may be poor. But in early June conditions were most ideal for poisoning red-backed cutworms.

Q. A bait in which light lubricating oil is used (instead of water-molasses mixture) to moisten the bran is proving exceptionally satisfactory. It remains effective for several days after spreading, unless there is a heavy rain or dust storm. J. L. Kerns suggested that if one had not unlimited power it would be better to clear up a small field at a time. In that case the risk of drifting would be minimized. If drifting started, such as furrowing, might be adopted to check it.

Q. Will you specify quantities for small areas?

A. Formula for Field Conditions
Bran, 100 pounds.
Sodium fluosilicate, 4 pounds.
Oil, 2 gallons.

Formula for One-Acre Garden
Bran, 25 pounds.
Sodium fluosilicate, 1 pound.
Oil, 2 quarts.

Formula for Small Garden
Bran, 1 quart.
Sodium fluosilicate, 1 tablespoonful.
Oil, 3 tablespoonfuls.

Any lightweight mineral oil can be used, such as No. 10 or No. 20 lubricating oil.

The oil and poison are mixed together thoroughly and kept stirred. The mixture is then slowly worked into the bran until every particle is moistened evenly. This may be done in a large tub or on a cement floor, the mixture being worked with a rake.

Q. Is there a suitable substitute for bran in the mixture?

A. It is believed that good results can probably be obtained with a mixture of one part of cheap flour to ten parts of sifted sawdust. Forty gallons of sawdust and 4 gallons of flour would be equivalent to 100 pounds of bran in the mixture. This mixture has given excellent results against grasshoppers, but the tests with cutworms are not complete.

Q. Would oat or barley chop be as satisfactory as bran?

A. I am very doubtful of this because they have not proved very suitable for grasshopper bait. Our experience also shows the chop is hard to mix in the bait. In a pinch, if nothing else is available, I think it would be worth while to try them, but at present would not recommend them otherwise.

Q. Can white arsenic or Paris green be used to poison the bait?

A. Yes, they are about equally effective, provided that the oil used with them is free from sulphur. Any sulphur in the oil will neutralize the arsenic poison, but sodium fluosilicate does not react in that way. Four to five pounds of white arsenic or two pounds of Paris green are required to poison 100 pounds of bran.

Q. Can oil drained from the engine crankcase be used satisfactorily in the bait?

A. Absolutely not. Such oil is repellent and its use means waste of all the time and materials.

Q. What do bait materials cost?

A. From 20 to 60 cents per acre for complete treatment. This depends in large part on the alfalfa you become in spreading it thinly. Five pounds per acre is sufficient for excellent kills if evenly distributed.

With hand-spreading, it is quite feasible to cover at the rate of 10 or 15 pounds per acre of oil bait. One hundred pounds of this bait costs about $2.50. Oil companies are co-operating locally by making low-grade lubricating oil available at cost, about $2 to $6 cents a gallon. Paris green is too expensive to use on a large field scale but is suitable for gardens.

Q. Is it difficult to mix the bait?

A. No, not particularly so. The poison is as possibly stirred into the oil, and this mixture then well worked through the bran. Every particle of the bran must, of course, be moistened with the oil and poison, and this takes considerable care when done by hand. Mixing machines do the job very easily and with present arrangements mixed bait will be available for most use.

Q. Is the poison or bait dangerous to handle?

A. Not if reasonable care is exercised at all times—just as you would with fire. For example, the poison and mixed bait should, of course, be kept safely locked away from children or animals. Care should also be taken to protect the hands and lungs from the poison, and to wash thoroughly after handling it before eating or drinking.

Q. After the bait is spread, is it dangerous to birds, poultry or live stock?

A. Not at all, if it is thinly spread, from large lumps.

Q. How do you spread the bait?

A. It should be evenly broadcast, as thin as possible. This may be done with the gloved hand or by using a narrow piece of board. Throw the bait high in the air across any breeze that is blowing. Special mechanical bait spreaders, of course, do a thinner, more uniform job, but are not at all essential for good cheap control. Such devices as grass seeders or seed drills with the funnels removed can do no doubt be used if desired, but hand-spreading is probably equally satisfactory in most instances.

Q. When should the bait be spread?

A. The oil bait can be broadcast at any time of day, but should not be put out when heavy rain seems threatening, or when it is too cool for cutworms to be active.

Q. Which crop is most palatable to red-backed cutworms?

A. Flax and seedling alfalfa and sweet clover, as well as many garden plants, all seem to be attacked about equally, but no crop can be considered immune.

Q. Patches have gone in my crop but the rest seems all right; how should I poison this?

A. I would recommend baiting a broad margin around each patch, chiefly on the side where the crop is still present. Then keep a close watch on the rest of the field and spread poison promptly wherever the crop seems to be suffering.

Q. Where a whole field is infested, would it not be better to scatter bait all across the field even if you had to miss 10 or 15 feet between sowings, as these worms get out and travel?

A. If strips as wide as that were scattered, it is probable that enough cutworms would be left to do serious damage to the crop in those strips. Some would move enough to get poison, but not enough of them, unless perhaps if the field were entirely black, to think a better way would be to go over the whole area very lightly, not trying to cover every foot with the bait as you go.

Q. The cutworms destroyed my crop, but I can find very few in the field now; is it safe to reseed without poisoning?

A. It is usually not safe. According to our observation, there are usually enough cutworms left, even though some move off, seriously to damage the new seedling just as they are coming through the ground. The safest way is to reseed with poison after you have reseeded but before the crop is up. Otherwise you should be prepared to poison at once if there is any sign of damage to the new crop.

Q. How long will the worms keep working?

A. Until about the end of June. Some of them may still be present in the early part of July.

Q. How can any tillage method of protecting a field from egg-laying by red-backed cutworms?

A. Much can be done to protect land being summerfallowed by working it well towards the end of July and then leaving it alone during August and early September. However, if there should occur a heavy growth of large weeds during that time it is best to destroy them. A growth of large weeds during the summer growth and flowers to supply nectar for the moths is ideal for egg-laying by the red-backed species. Each female moth can lay several hundred eggs.

Q. How can any special tillage system in fall or early spring that would destroy the worm eggs?

A. Much can be done to protect land being summerfallowed by working it well towards the end of July and then leaving it alone during August and early September. However, if there should occur a heavy growth of large weeds during that time it is best to destroy them. A growth of large weeds during the summer growth and flowers to supply nectar for the moths is ideal for egg-laying by the red-backed species. Each female moth can lay several hundred eggs.

Q. Where can I obtain further directions on poisoning and methods for cutworm control?

A. The Dominion Extension newspapers from time to time. Also send for leaflets from the Dominion Experimental Station, Beaver Lodge, or obtain them from the Provincial District Agriculturists.

T. B.-Free Area Will Eliminate The Menace To Human Health

In Addition Buyers Will Purchase Live Stock More Readily And At Higher Prices In An Established Tuberculosis-Free District.

BEAVER LODGE, June 2.—Following a talk last winter by H. W. Scott of the Alberta Department of Agriculture, the Beaver Lodge U.F.A. decided to inaugurate a movement for the establishment of a restricted area for the control of bovine tuberculosis and appointed a committee to organize a campaign to interest other locals and other organizations. The resolution did not prevent the boundaries for the proposed district, as the Dominion government has decided after the publicity campaign had revealed the extent of the interest. The larger and more economic aid efficient will be the initiation and administration of the project and the greater the ultimate benefit to the residents of the district.

Advantages Of Banning Bovine Tuberculosis

1. Possibly the most outstanding advantage is that it eliminates a source of human life and health. While it is generally recognized that the use of dairy products from cows infected by bovine tuberculosis is dangerous, very little is ever done about it in rural areas. Incorporated urban areas can protect themselves to a certain extent, but in rural areas only an occasional herd is tested for tuberculosis.

2. The public is demanding dairy products from healthy herds.

3. The economic losses incurred by feeding and caring for unhealthy cattle and swine is a matter of considerable importance to stock growers. The presence of tuberculosis in a herd is difficult to determine without an actual test. Often animals affected by the disease are sold at a loss as well as being a menace to the rest of the herd and the owner's family since following tuberculous cattle or consuming unpasteurized milk from tuberculous cows contract the disease in considerable numbers.

4. Buyers will purchase more readily and at higher prices in an established T.B.-free area.

5. We have reason to believe the percentage of reactors here will be comparatively small.

6. What steps are required to establish a T.B.-free area and what will be the expense and how will this be provided for? At least two-thirds of the cattle owners in any defined area must sign a petition for the establishment of a T.B.-free area. This must be presented to the Provincial Tuberculosis Commission. If the committee is satisfied with the merits of the case, the provincial government will issue a declaration of intent to create a T.B.-free area as asked for in the petition and will agree to get the policy inaugurated.

7. The inspection of all cattle is carried out at government expense and compensation is paid for the work of testing, furnishing means and lodging for inspectors if necessary. Cattle owners must cooperate in the work of testing, furnishing means and lodging for inspectors if necessary. Cattle owners must cooperate in the work of testing, furnishing means and lodging for inspectors if necessary.

8. Another policy that might well be started along with the establishment of a T.B.-free area is to reduce the country of warble flies in cattle and hot flies in horses. We all know some of the pestiferous nose flies that during the summer months when being chased out of the eyes of cattle and horses cause such a great deal of suffering among the owners. Other parts of Alberta are taking up this work of establishing T.B.-free areas as well as the fight against warble flies and hot flies. We feel it is time for us to act.

9. The first action in the Peace to establish a restricted area for the control of bovine tuberculosis was taken by the U.F.A. at Waterloo (Fairview). Its action and that of the Beaver Lodge U.F.A. was commended by the technical fieldmen's conference meeting at the Beaver Lodge Experimental Substation May 29 and 30, and the support of the Alberta Department of Agriculture is assured. It was suggested at the aforesaid conference that the committee also get in touch with District 1 Farmers' Institute in the British Columbia Block.

10. Petitions will be furnished to any who ask for them. Will you arrange with any other interested parties to hold a meeting in your local school-house to discuss the matter of a tuberculosis-free area and the control of both warbles?

At such a meeting we suggest that you appoint a committee of one or more to make a personal canvass of your school district with a petition. Copies of petitions may be had from your district agriculturist or myself. The school districts have been suggested as units for canvassing, since their boundaries are well known and this will prevent overlapping.

It should be understood that the use of shallow tillage implements and cover crops may result in slightly reduced yields per acre. It is believed, however, that the time has come when it is more important to eliminate soil drifting and continue to get reasonably good yields year after year than it is to produce high yields for a year or so and have the land become valueless through soil drifting as a result of old-fashioned and improper summer fallow practices.

BROADCASTING THE ROYAL VISIT

Day in and day out, during the month-long visit of Their Majesties the King and Queen to Canada picked CBC commentators are on hand to describe the ceremonies and festivities, wherever they may be, to radio audiences in Canada, the United States and abroad. The above picture taken on Parliament Hill, Ottawa, during the ceremony of Trooping the Color, May 20, is typical of the Corporation's microphone positions. Three or four such positions, each with two commentators and remote control units, are required in the larger cities in order to give a comprehensive coverage of major events, over both French and English networks. R. T. "Bob" Bowman, in charge of CBC's Special Events Department, is seen as he catches the first glimpse of H.M. the King arriving for the ceremony. The commentator at right is George A. Browne, of the Corporation's Ottawa staff.

The post office and residence, owned by J. L. Hill, challenges the second place to none in the North for interior finish and niceness. And for being a mail service none can surpass Faust.

EVERYBODY AT ANNUAL PICNIC

The entire South Wapiti community turned out for the annual picnic at the school-house on Saturday last. There were also many visitors from this side of the river.

After a program of racing for the children a general pow-wow was held and then a picnic supper. An event of the day was the cutting of the cake in honor of Miss Gladys Moore and Mr. Carl Brown, who were both celebrating their birthdays.

Exceptional ability was shown by every member of the cast, who had had but a very short time for rehearsal. The artists included Mr. and Mrs. Herb Riggs, Messrs. FISH CREEK

FISH CREEK, June 5.—Those attending the White Mud sports from here were the Misses Helen Gilmore and Nellie Gunn, and George and Hugh Gunn and Ernie Keizer. They reported having a wonderful time, meeting a lot of nice people, some tall blonde and handsome. Only one of the party seemed glum at the dance. We think he must have had a premonition of the visit to his home of his girl friend in his absence.

Miss Pauline De Winter has returned from spending a few days at Valleyview with her friend, Mrs. Ida Reber, who accompanied Pauline home.

Jim Gordon took advantage of the truck going to Edmonton on June 1 to visit his wife, who is a patient in the General Hospital.

Ball practice is being enjoyed about twice a week by the youngsters at the new school.

The recent rains were very encouraging until the frost of June 1 and 2. Now, when I look where my 600 cabbages were—well, putting it mildly, they are like to live in a country where frosts are unknown.

FLYING SHOT ITEMS

TERRIBLE BUT TRUE

FLYING SHOT, June 13.—The theme song of many of the farmers in this district, as well as in others, runs like this:

Show me the way to grow plants, I'm tired of seeing them dead; I had a little shoot about an hour ago.

Now a cutworm has bitten off its head.

With this in mind several of the more hopeful farmers drove to the Flying Shot on Saturday to see what they could see.

ANGELICAN SERVICES LAST SUNDAY

The Anglican service was held on Sunday at St. Barnabas Church, with a fair congregation present. Rev. Dale Fontaine, of the Anglican Church, Grande Prairie, is rapidly becoming acquainted with the members of this congregation.

DRAMATIC CLUB ELECTS NEW OFFICERS

The Dramatic Club held a meeting on Monday evening in the school-house. New officers were elected for the fall season as follows: President, Tom Eskdale; Vice-president, Carl Zahn; Secretary, Margaret Carl; Treasurer, Edith Tinsington.

After a prolonged discussion a play was chosen. Its title is "Small Town Romeo." It is a gripping melodrama in three acts, with plenty of action. Ghosts, blood-curdling screams, thieves, gun detectives, and with us of the heart, it is the correct moment, are all included in a clever plot. This play will probably be put on soon after harvesting is over.

Mr. and Mrs. Hughton and Carol spent the week-end with their folks at DeBolt. Mr. Hughton is from the East on Friday and completed the journey with them.

There are a few tickets left on the lovely quilt made by the ladies which is to be raffled at the picnic. You may be the lucky one, so don't pass up this last chance to get your ticket. Any of the Flying Shot ladies will be glad to oblige you.

FLYING SHOT, June 10.—At the Presbyterian service held at the school-house, Mr. A. Calder substituted very capably for Rev. C. E. Fisher, who is in the hospital. Several members of the congregation did not know that service would be held, attendance was low.

The next service will be held on Sunday, June 18, at 3 p.m.

Most of the Flying Shot people seemed to be very much interested in Sunday. The Eskdales were guests at the Jim Tinsingtons; the Geras were at the school-house; Mrs. Luckey entertained the Owens; the Alex. Camerons visited the Bernard Tinsingtons; the Boutfields and Mrs. Henderson were guests at the Bob Camerons.

Much delight was expressed at the result of the concert. The ladies did a little well-merited back-patting. This concert was a comparatively new undertaking for the ladies and we are sorry that there were no Hollywood stars in the audience.

Mrs. Stubbs and Mrs. Eskdale were hostesses and a delicious tea was served. The program will be arranged by Mrs. Hughton and the hostesses will be Mrs. Tinsington and Mrs. Hughton.

BRITISH SUBMARINE SINKS WITH LOSS OF NINETY-NINE LIVES

The new British submarine Thetis, which was undergoing acceptance tests near the mouth of the River Mersey over two weeks ago, when she went down in what was to be a three-hour dive but failed to return to the surface, is still at the bottom of the Irish Sea off Liverpool. Only four men escaped. For some reason other members of the crew failed to use the Davis escape equipment. The main picture above shows one of the sister ships of the Thetis, which went down the slipway only a few days after the doomed submarine. At the top is a picture of the escape equipment on the Thetis. Each man wears the equipment shown above and leaves the submarine in an "air bubble" from the little chamber into which the demonstrator is stepping. At the top right naval divers are shown.

ARE BRITAIN'S "SPITFIRES" ALREADY OBSOLETE?

A line-up of Britain's fastest fighting planes at Duxford Aerodrome, with "Geordie," the mascot, on the receiving line. A new and faster plane has now been produced by British technicians which will relegate the Spitfires to the second line of attack. When it is realized that the Spitfires have a speed of more than 350 miles an hour and can dive at approximately 500 miles an hour, their successors must have phenomenal speeds.

J. H. Tremblay...

of the old Homestead Act. He said that the homestead now has no assurance that he will ever get ownership. According to the provisions of the Act, the homesteader may make application for title in ten years, and it is up to the Minister whether title will be granted or not.

Dealing with the school divisions, Mr. Tremblay said he was not criticizing the principle of the scheme, but he believed that the people should have an opportunity to say whether they want such a system or not. He promised to continue to fight for the repeal of the Act.

Touching on private debts, the speaker contended that the private debtor is worse off today for the reason that the credit of the province had been destroyed. In dealing with the trend of legislation of the Alberta government, Mr. Tremblay said that if it wasn't for the fact that the Act was disallowed by the courts, the farmers would have to pay a seven per cent production tax.

In closing, Mr. Tremblay promised to keep on fighting for the principles of democracy and for the rights of the people of the north and south.

Mr. Tremblay also addressed the meeting in French.

E. L. Gray, Liberal leader of Alberta, at the outset of his address predicted that there would be a provincial election in the near future. He stated that his first visit to the Peace River was with Mr. Carleton, then Live Stock Commissioner, to make a survey of the country in regard to its development.

Mr. Gray congratulated the convention on nominating Mr. Tremblay, who, he said, would not always be an ordinary member, for he is a man who has shown the greatest courage in battling against the government's crushing majority in the legislature.

Continuing, Mr. Gray said that he had divested of all his promises, the sum total of the government's record had been to pass more abortive legislation and to pass budgets during its four years of office of between $80,000,000 and $100,000,000.

The Liberal leader further stated that the per capita debt had increased ten dollars, the taxes being $7,000,000 above that of the U.F.A. government when it went out of power.

Mr. Gray then dealt with the increasing costs of the Public Works Department. He pointed out that in 1935 the travelling expenses were $51,469.72, and in 1936, $108,000.

The cost of printing supplies had increased from $6,508.10 in 1935 to $11,520.35; postage, $1,400.00; and telephone costs had advanced from $37,813.91 in 1935 to $44,847.00 in 1936. The cost of equipment had increased from $10,109 in 1935 to $42,683.

The government, observed Mr. Gray, was making much of the money spent on the roads, which amounted to $2,151,328.44. In the same year the government defaulted on interest on the bonds which amounted to $3,191,448.86, so the saving was not put on the roads, the speaker added.

Mr. Gray then turned his attention to federal matters and drew attention to the trade treaty with the United States, under which the farmer gets a dollar a head increase on horses and cattle. Going further, the speaker spoke of the assistance given the cheese industry, and of the pardoning of the debt value to 80 per cent, the cutting off of two years' interest, and the reduction of the rate of interest and the time extended to 20 years.

Mr. Gray then took up the matter of the price of farm machinery. He said that he had been doing a little investigating since arriving in High Prairie and he found that an 8-foot binder cost $340, and all the other implements in proportion. He pointed out that a binder that cost $200, if it had to be replaced, would cost $600, and the parts of a mower costing $80 would mean an expenditure of $174.

"Reduction in the price of farm machinery is absolutely necessary, and if we are elected we will move to that end," the speaker added.

Mr. Gray then turned his attention especially to the Peace River. He observed that there were two kinds of immigration, the one necessary to the development of a country; people and money. "If you are going to complete the Canadian Policy Highway, improve the railway and other facilities, then you must have a further immigration of money," stated Mr. Gray, who then went on to say that the Liberals, if elected, proposed to earmark revenues—such as car license, gas tax, and liquor license, etc.—"I venture to say that only a portion of revenues collected from the Peace River was paid out to this part of the province. We propose to rectify this," added Mr. Gray, who in closing warned his hearers that this part of the province would be held back for a long time if the people did not watch out. He said that there were people living on the outside of Canada who knew more about the Peace River than some people in the south of the province.

"It is therefore highly essential that you send Mr. Tremblay to Edmonton to continue the fight for the rights of this north country," said Mr. Gray.

Jack Sissons, Liberal candidate to represent Peace River in the House of Commons, said:

"Your chairman has asked me to say a few words while you are awaiting the reports of your committees. I assure you that my remarks will be very brief."

"I do wish to express my pleasure at being present here today and to congratulate you on the wonderful turnout for this convention and the tremendous enthusiasm that is so evident."

"It is indeed a pleasure to be present on occasions such as this and to meet old friends and new friends. There are some things about being a political candidate that are not so pleasant, but this getting around and meeting the men and women of the constituency, and giving me real pleasure, and I am truly enjoying it."

"I am pleased also to be in the city with your member, Mr. Tremblay, who has served the Grouard constituency so ably and intelligently and brilliantly. It is also a particular pleasure to be on the same platform with Mr. E. L. Gray, Liberal leader of the Alberta Liberal party."

"Not only is it a pleasure to be here today but I have the opportunity to learn more about the problems of the constituency, and only the problems of the Grande Prairie district but the problems of every part of this whole Peace River federal constituency. I am very anxious to learn all I can about those problems."

"I am more interested in discussion of the development of the Peace River country and in the solution of its problems and in the welfare of the men and women of the constituency than I am in the discussion of party principles and policies. I am sure that this is the occasion for the discussion of these problems and the measures necessary for their solution. I will have ample opportunity for that later on in the campaign."

"If I am elected to Ottawa I intend to place the solution of those problems ahead of all other considerations and to fight at all times for the Peace River country to the very limit of my ability. I intend also to seek the cooperation of all those who are prepared to fight with me, regardless of what their political affiliations may have been in the past."

As I am primarily interested in the problems of the Peace River country, it obviously follows that I must be opposed to all policies in my view retard the development of this country and the solution of its problems. I am not, however, a date, I have no apologies to offer for being present at a provincial nominating convention.

The present Alberta government stands in the way of the development of the Peace River country. Its policies are holding back the solution of the problems of the north and the welfare of the men and women of this constituency. I am not opposed to the government because it is a Social Credit government but I am opposed to it because it is a reactionary government. I know that the Alberta government gets a great kick out of thinking that it is a radical government. As a matter of fact it is reactionary beyond anything I ever knew. It is the most reactionary government that there has been in Canada since before the war.

I challenge anyone to find a more reactionary government in the world today. Not only is it a most reactionary government but its policies are antagonistic to all kinds of democratic principles and of Canadian unity.

I will not keep you longer. Again I assure you how very pleased I am to be here today and to thank you for your very kind reception. I am sure your convention will be a great success. I am sure that you will find behind the man whom you nominate today as your candidate and work for him, the support of the entire constituency. I am confident that on election day, I am confident that on election day, I am confident that the battle has cleared away and they have carried the dead and dying out of the field, and the living will find the Liberal candidate for Grouard has been elected by the largest majority of any candidate in the province."

Joe McIsaac, K.C., of Sexsmith, on being called upon, spoke in support of Mr. Tremblay. He said Mr. Sissons had referred to the Social Credit government as being reactionary. Mr. Tremblay had been nominated by the people of the Grouard constituency, and he would not do this. He would select the Social Credit candidate.

Mr. McIsaac predicted that the four provincial constituencies in the Peace River would send four Liberals to Edmonton.

The speaker referred to the term, "What is the matter with the Liberals?" I do not know. I know it is no good with the bank," Mr. McIsaac appealed to the voters to work for the election of Mr. Tremblay.

Page Rideout, of the town of Peace River, who spoke in support of Mr. Tremblay, spoke in a humorous vein. He said that after the constituency boundaries were drawn, the line he found that he had some property at Judith which entitled him to the vote of the constituency.

There was only one resolution presented, which was unanimously carried. It is as follows:

"That this convention strongly endorse our federal government's policy in regard to assistance given for the building of roads in the Peace River country and we regret very much the failure of the provincial government to take full advantage of same."

"That we once again urge upon the provincial government the necessity of giving the Peace River country telephonic communication with the rest of the province."

"That this convention further urge upon the provincial government the necessity of constructing the road from Grouard to the westward to the ferry on the Big Smoky at Watino."

"That government assistance be granted to provide drainage facilities wherever needed."

"That the government give returned to the province in all government appointments."

"That this convention strongly endorse reciprocal trade agreements that have been completed by our federal government."

Presented With Beautiful Clock—Mrs. Baxter Fittingly Replied—Rev. Mr. C. W. G. Mavor, speaking for The Ministerial Association, Referred To Cooperation Which That Organization Had Always Received From Mr. Baxter.

Last Monday night members of the congregation and friends gathered at McLaurin Baptist Church and presented Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Baxter with a beautiful mantle clock on the eve of their departure to Asquith, Sask., where Mr. Baxter is called to take charge of the Baptist church. The clock was presented by the Ministerial Association, which occupied the chair. The presentation was made by Mr. Rudd of Dimas.

In replying, Mrs. Baxter spoke of the pleasant seven years which they had spent in the Peace River country, thanking the donors for the splendid gift, adding that the clock's chiming would remind them of the good friends here.

A. W. Cann, representing the Ministerial Association, expressed appreciation of the cooperation which Mr. and Mrs. Baxter had received from Mr. Baxter during his seven years residence at Grande Prairie.

Adjutant Eby of the Salvation Army said that he was told before he left the city that Mr. Baxter was ready to cooperate. He said that true.

Rev. Mr. Board of the Sixsmith Bible Institute said that he had every reason to respect and love Mr. Baxter because the Bible school was cradled in Mr. Baxter's home at Grande Prairie.

Many of the congregation expressed their regret that Mr. and Mrs. Baxter were leaving the city, and none of them should forget God.

He asked the congregation to stand behind him when he spoke, and they did so behind him.

Bezanson Sports and Picnic Enjoyed By Good Crowd

There was a nice crowd at Bezanson's annual sports on Wednesday afternoon. The picnic idea dominated the occasion and oldtimers and new-timers met and chatted.

There was a pick-up ball game and baseball and athletic events. A highlight of the afternoon was a middle-aged men's race. It was agreed that the race would be a 100-yard dash. The race was won by Leslie, however, put on the power, showed a terrific burst of speed, and beat Steve to the wire.

G. P. HIGH SCHOOL GIRLS' SOFTBALL TEAM ENJOYS EVENING AT MRS. MAYER'S

An enjoyable evening was held at the home of Mrs. E. G. Mavor on Monday evening, June 12, when the Grande Prairie High School girls' softball team, Progressive Club, were entertained.

A hearty lunch was then served by the hostess, assisted by Miss Lillian Morrow and Miss Joan Angus. After singing "For She's a Jolly Good fellow" the girls started for their homes, happy to think that Mrs. Mavor had taken such a keen interest in their activities.

The High School girls' softball team is entirely independent, paying their own expenses, having no coach or sponsor. They have played eight games in all and have yet to be defeated. The only regret the girls have is that the team must be disbanded at the end of June, when they have to return to their homes.
